

Me? A TLMI committee volunteer? Are you kidding?

There is no better way to get to know other members of TLMI than when you volunteer for one of the organization's committees. And, no, we are not kidding at all. Everyone who volunteers to serve on a committee brings a unique set of skills, industry insights, and experiences to the committee experience. The committees serve a valuable role to keep the key programs and offerings of TLMI moving forward and vibrant. That is not possible without a dedicated group of committee members working together to improve TLMI's programs, meetings and offerings.

Working together with other members from across the industry, both converters and suppliers, allows you to get to know individuals much better than from simply attending TLMI meetings and conferences. The occasional committee meetings and telephone conference calls, which focus on critical industry association issues, provides an opportunity to build business friendships that offer valuable industry connections. TLMI's brand is built around the core essence of insight. That core essence is the underpinning for TLMI's brand promise: To deliver industry insight that drives member success. Volunteering your time to help ensure the organization delivers meaningful insight to our members comes back to you many times over through the personal connection you can gain with other industry leaders focused on the common goal of building a strong, vibrant TLMI.

No, we are not kidding. Come on, jump on board one of the TLMI's ongoing, active committees. You'll be glad you did. Click here to get started: Join a Committee.

Tag and Label Manufacturers Institute, Inc.